Read and discuss Life Application Study Bible Commentary:

12:17 The commands in verses 17-21 relate mainly to dealings with nonbelievers. When people do evil against us, we are never to pay back evil for evil, as much as we might like to (see also 1 Peter 3:9). Instead, we are to do things in such a way that everyone can see we are honorable (see 1 Peter 2:11-12). 12:18 Paul counsels believers to have as peaceful relations as possible with their unbelieving neighbors and associates. In a perfect world, all people could live peacefully together. Realistically this is impossible in our imperfect world. 12:19 Quoting from Deuteronomy 32:35, Paul reminds us that though we may want to avenge ourselves, we must leave that to God. Refusing to take revenge avoids grudges and feuds. God will ensure that his just vengeance will be given. 12:20 The opposite of repaying with evil and taking revenge is caring for our enemies. Believers are not simply expected to abstain from evil; rather, they are expected to actively pursue opportunities to care for an enemy's needs. God invites us to observe our enemies and at the very points of weakness, where a counterattack of revenge might be most effective, we should mercifully meet that need. This will make them ashamed of their actions toward us.
